

Ms. Younseung Lee

Ms. Lee is a professor of classical voice and the Director of MusiCarte Institution, , where she is dedicated to nurturing and developing the next generation of vocalists.

She graduated from Sun-hwa Arts High School, one of Korea's distinguished arts high schools, and went on to earn her degree in Vocal Music from Chung-Ang University. After completing her undergraduate studies, she pursued graduate studies in Music Education at Yonsei University Graduate School of Education, where she earned her Master's degree. To further deepen her expertise in music education, she completed specialized studies in Dalcroze Eurhythmics in New York. Through this additional training, she developed a broader understanding of music education, combining her foundation in classical vocal performance with educational approaches that emphasize musicality, movement, rhythm, and artistic expression.

Throughout her career in Korea, Lee Younseung has taught major courses at Seoul Christian University, providing professional vocal instruction and musical guidance to aspiring musicians. She currently continues her educational work as the Director of MusiCarte Institution, where she provides systematic and individualized vocal training to students of various ages and levels.

Her students have achieved notable results through performances and musical activities with KBS (Korean Broadcasting System), and many of her students have had opportunities to appear in KBS broadcasts. She has also accumulated extensive experience in preparing young singers for auditions for the Seoul Metropolitan Youth & Children's Choir, with numerous students successfully gaining admission.

Her approach to vocal education emphasizes not only vocal technique, but also accurate pronunciation, musical interpretation, breath control, stage presence, and confident performance. Through systematic and individualized training, she has guided students in developing both their technical abilities and artistic expression.

With her academic background in Vocal Music and Music Education, specialized training in Dalcroze Eurhythmics, university-level teaching experience, and extensive experience nurturing young vocalists, Lee Younseung brings a comprehensive perspective to vocal education and adjudication. She is committed to encouraging each student to develop a strong musical foundation and discover their own unique artistic voice.
